

The federal govt. should not inhibit the rights of states and their citizens. As guaranteed in the constitution, the federal govt. does NOT have complete and final say over state law. States should have say over actions taken to PROTECT the citizens of that state.

The Indiana Telephone Privacy law has definitely improved my quality of life. I don't have to interrupt my family's dinner by answering the phone for someone out of state who has no concern for my right to privacy. When I answer the phone now, I am assured that I can answer the phone knowing I will not be wasting my time with a telemarketer.

I am not normally against the rights of business. However, if a company wants to sell me a product or service then that company can send me an email, snail mail, or fax. Calling me is too much an invasion of my privacy and every citizen in the state of Indiana.
